February 28, 2003, Buffalo, NY (USA) - Ziphany, LLC, a provider of Energy monitoring/verification systems, returns to Buffalo following another successful tradeshow. Ziphany experienced a steady stream of interested parties including representatives from numerous large Universities, Government and State agencies, Utilities, private companies, commercial and retail representatives and consultants.

Tim Mattulke VP Business Development Ziphany, commented, "Our reception at the Baltimore show was tremendous. We are trying to build upon our existing customer base Baltimore region, that should not be difficult based upon the results of this show."

Ziphany provides an open-ended communications platform that permits data acquisition from multiple hardware devices and existing building management systems. These data are then transferred to Ziphany's secure website where presentation applications can be utilized to view information to help reduce operational costs.
